| WHERE WE STARTED       | Good families and good kids, playing good baseball.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| MISSION                | Preserve the love of the game.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| MOTTO                  | Make them want to come back tomorrow.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| WHAT TO EXPECT         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| PLAY FIRST             | Play leads. We will drill when a skill is brand new, but getting it into a game is the whole point. Short reps, then live.                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| QUESTIONS, NOT ANSWERS | "Where are you going with the ball?" "What would you try next time?" We would rather let a kid work it out than hand him the answer. That is our philosophy. When a rep needs coaching, we keep it one on one, one cue, aimed at a goal or target instead of a body part.                                                                    |
| SIDELINES              | The kids run the field. They call where the ball goes, which base, cut or hold. Once the pitch is thrown, it is theirs. That is where the learning is. Between plays is when parents and coaches get their chance.                                                                                                                           |
| EVERY POSITION         | Outfield, shortstop, catcher, pitcher, bench. Everybody, everywhere. We open on a set rotation so every kid gets the same look, then adjust. No preferential treatment.                                                                                                                                                                      |
| GROWTH MINDSET         | Praise courage, good decisions, and problem solving out loud. Mistakes are not the price of learning, they are the currency.                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| THE LONG GAME          | We will never know how good these boys can be if they quit. Research consistently links kids staying in sports with enjoying it, feeling capable, and having supportive adults around them. And no one can tell at age nine who will end up being the best player. The ones who keep showing up find out how good they can be. Nobody else gets to. |

🌴 PARENTS, YOU HAVE ONE JOB

"I LOVE WATCHING YOU PLAY."

Five words after every game or practice, good day or bad. No car ride coaching, no replaying at bats. The coaching is ours. That sentence is yours, and it tells them there is nothing they have to earn from you after a game.
